PERSONAL AND SOCIETY.

Social Observances.

The notices of church entertainments which are made to-day would hardly be credited ten years ago. Amusements which were stricken from the church calendar are now accepted as quite the proper thing. The idea of sanctity which was given to the church is construed more liberally now, and many things are held in churches which would have been considered desperately wicked to have been even connected with the church. All kinds of entertainments are given for the benefit of the funds to carry on different portions of the work. The theaters, skating rinks, music hall, chapel and church at different times have served as audience rooms for such purposes. The character of the entertainments are as varied as the places where they are given. A lecture on a sacred subject is followed by one illustrated with made up of a programme from the best authors.

Again a humorous sketch is introduced. A sacred concert may be followed by a ballad concert. Again a celebrated singer is the nucleus for a concert. The the music alternates with readings and recitations. Tableaux make a good finale. Then a poem, illustrated with tableaux. A fair, for the sale of useful and ornamental, and for neither useful nor ornamental articles is held, the visitor paying extraordinary articles is held, the visitor paying extraordinary prices for extra-ordinary things. Shakspeare and other dramatists furnish food for a delightful evening, and then a short standard play may be given. This in turn followed by a light comedy, an oratoria, cantata, or operetta lead to an opera. A "Smith Family" concert is companion to "Over the Garden Wall," where figures or flowers painted on canvas, have the face of one or center of the other left vacant to be filled by the face of one who can sing the required part. A minstrel performance has for its chief actors some of the superintendents and Sunday-school teachers taking an active part. The enlargement has been gradual, and while there may have been some who objected, and often pretty vigorously, the majority have been favorably inclined and have carried the day. The women of the churches, who have these affairs in charge, tax themselves to the utmost to try to suggest novel methods and ideas for the entertainments. The social part of church life is cultivated to a much greater extent. The minister, rector, preacher, or whatever he man be called, does not make so many calls, perhaps, as he used to, but the minister of affairs takes care that there shall be so many evenings during the year set apart when the entire congregation shall set apart when the entire congregation shall meet socially to become better acquainted. The congregation is divided into sections, each taking turn in preparing for one evening. The refreshments must be prepared, the Sundayschool room cleared of its chairs and benches. Something unusual and attrative must be used to beautify the room and give it a festive appearance. In most of the churches a room is set apart as a kitchen. During the past week a large number of churches have given entertainments, and they have been almost as varied as the entire list named above would indicate. There has been such a dearth of other diversions that all have been largely attended and liberally patronized. Now that the grass is long enough to be cut, those who have room for a tennis court are having the court measured in the mowing. Instead of the old lines of lime or salt, the narrow width of grass is left uncut. It gives the lawn a peculiar appearance, and one not familiar with the tennis court would wonder what it was left for. tennis court would wonder what it was left for.

The great English game is being renewed here, and grows in favor. The fad of being an athlete is still as strong as ever, and the out-door games and amusements are increasing. The idea was given at the Woman's Club on Friday that the prevailing notion that every Englishman has that Americans never stop for recreation, could no longer be said to be true, when one attended the base-bail games and saw the number of men and women in attendance. There is no doubt but what Americans live just as long, as well as happily as their brothers across the sea. Here everbody works, and there those who work have to do it, not only for themselves but for "My lord, the duke," whose reputed income is so princely.

A delightful surprise and "impromptu" musicale was given on Thursday evening at the residence of one of our well-known musicians. Preachers often complain that they never have the opportunity to hear their brother workers preach, while with musicians the complaint is that they have heard everything their friends have to sing time and again. On Thursday evening it was arranged so that every contributor should have something entirely new to offer, and the result was that some composing had to be done, and more hunting among old musty books almost forgotten by the musical world. It is now proposed to give the public the benefit of the little "treat," and it should be done at an early day. done at an early day.

A new departure in the line of entertainments is promised in a week or so at the Grand Operahouse, when the management intend to reserve the boxes and stalls for the use of amateur stenographers, who are to contest for a prize in gold offered for the best report of the entertainment. Acknowledged experts and professionals are to be excluded from the contest in order to give the ordinary writers a chance. Few people not directly interested have any idea of the number earning their daily bread by their pencils in this way in this city alone. Their name is legion, and will fill the "reserves" to over-

Chicago and Indianapolis League clubs were represented. In the ninth inning the Indianapolis Club stood 6 to Chicago and Indian

Miss Lucy Jacobs delightfully entertained a few friends last Thursday evening at her home on North Delaware street. Those present were Misses Lucy Cal-kins, Mable Folsom, Janet Payne and Miss Jacobs, from Chicago, Messrs. Horne, Garvin, Payne, Dan Calkins, Scot Wadley, Herbert Ashbrooke, Edson Folsom and Ed Branham.

A number of young misses in Hebrew social circles met last week to form a literary club. They will study the American authors, beginning with the colonial period. They elected officers as follows: President, Miss Essie Messing; vice-president, Miss Carrie Rosenthal; secretary, Miss Carrie Selig. The society promises to become a success.

Invitations for children's parties recently have been original in their wording. The one issued last week was, "Come and see the twins. Ida-Robbins-Albert. Saturday, May 19." The friends generally accepted this invitation, and a merrier party of children have not been seen for many a day. They enjoyed each part of the entertainment equally well, and pronounced it one of the pleasantest times they had ever enjoyed.

The Iroquois Club tendered a reception to Messrs.

Armin Recker and Otto Lund on Tuesday evening, which proved an enjoyable event. During the evening an impromptu concert was given, consisting of selections by an orchestra directed by Otto Lund and assisted by Armin Recker; solos by Messrs. Recker, Lund, Ed Harmon, and recitations by J. Whitcomb Riley. Frank Richards and Harry Porter. One of the features of the entertainment was the splendid rendition of Gus Recker's waltz song, "Memories of the Beach," by the orchestra, which met with a hearty encore. The guests and their friends were highly pleased with the royal reception they! received, and this event will long be remembered by all present.

The arrangements for the "Ben-Hur" entertainment are progressing most favorably. Mrs. Bradford will be here this week to attend to rehearsals, and on Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon and evening it will be presented at English's Operahouse. The cast has been selected with great care, and the costumes are all furnished by Mrs. Bradford and are perfectly correct in every particular. Miss Marion Stearns, of Springfield, Mass., has been secured to read the scenes. Miss Stearns has read before for Mrs. Bradford, and is considered excellent. The entertainment is under the auspices of the ladies of Meridian-street M. E. Church, for the benefit of the Nurses' Home. The presence of Gen. Lew Wallace will add interest to the beautiful and instructive tableaux illustrating his great book.

A party was given at the residence of Mr. G. W.

A party was given at the residence of Mr. G. W. Moore on West North street, lastiWednesday evening. It was a surprise to Miss Dollie Moore and the attendance was very large. Reger, Ora Ayres, Mr. Griffin, John Lane and Mart Dugan.

The musical and literary entertainment at the Central Christian Church, Friday evening, was one of the most attractive that has been given this season. The programme introduced some of the best musical and literary talent in the city, including Mr. Ora Pearson, of the former class, and Mr. James Whitcomb Riley of the latter. Mr. Pearson's vocal solo was rendered with the excellence which distinguishes this gentleman's work. It, like other numbers on the programme, was received with every manifestation of pleasure from the brilliant audience. The ladies and gentlemen who took part, aside from those specially mentioned, were Miss Bertie Bloomer, who gave a piano solo; Mr. Andrew Smith, Mrs. Annie Walker and Mrs. John C. New, whose numbers were vocal solos; Miss Genevieve Elliott, Mr. Harry Porter and Mr. James Leathers, who gave readings.
